SHERIFF OF YORK COUNTY CHARGED WITH BRIBERY

Charles O. Emery Accused of Trying to Buy Prosecutor in Liquor Cases

Kennebunk, Me., March 26.—Church and purchased liquor with Charles O. Emery, sheriff of York county, was arrested today at his home in Sanford, charged with attempting to bribe Asa A. Richardson, county attorney, to protect liquor sellers in Biddeford, Saco, Sanford, Old Orchard and elsewhere in the county. It is alleged Sheriff Emery offered Atty. Richardson $50 a week.

Sheriff Emery was brought to this town and tonight was arraigned before Trial Justice Harold H. Bourne. He pleaded not guilty and was held for hearing Saturday morning under $10,000. Bonds were furnished by Orville E. Libby, Moses H. Libby, George A. Bachelder, Charles A. Trafton, Stillman H. Bodwell, Jesse A. Johnson and Walter K. Emery, all of Sanford.

Atty. Richardson said tonight that Sheriff Emery visited his house Feb. 28 and was given a seat near an open heating register. Witnesses in the room below heard and transcribed the conversation. It was at this time, it is alleged that an offer was made to Mr. Richardson.

On March 8, there was another conference, this time at the office of the county attorney, and hidden witnesses will testify, according to the county attorney that the sheriff gave Mr. Richardson five 20-dollar bills.

NEW JAIL AT BRENTWOOD NOW IN USE

Has Accommodations For Fifty Prisoners

The new jail at the Rockingham County farm at Brentwood will officially be put in commission today, following a meeting of the board of commissioners. Fifty prisoners will be transferred to the new prison. The jail work was completed by the Pauly Jail Building company of New York in February and accepted by the county shortly after.

CHARLES H. FOOTE BADLY BURNED

Charles H. Foote, an employee of the street division of public works department was badly burned on Tuesday afternoon. He was engaged in burning up paper and other waste on the city dump when his clothing took fire from the blaze and in the strong wind which prevailed at the time. His body was soon wrapped in flames. Mr. Foote being an old fire fighter lost no time in acting and began rolling in the snow.

Harry Amazeen another employee working with him came to his assistance and after a lively fight cleared Mr. Foote of his burning clothing. His overalls and jumper were consumed by the blaze as well as some of his under clothing.

Though his burns are not considered serious, it was certainly a narrow escape for him.

Charles J. Ramsdell of Cambridge, Mass., passed Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Raitt in this city.

TAFET MAKES CLEAN SWEEP OF NEW YORK DELEGATION

Gets 83 Out of 90.—Roosevelt's Showing Meager—Chaos in Balloting

New York, March 26.—Victory for organization delegates to the Republican national convention, who are opposed in 17 congressional districts of New York state at today's primaries by candidates named an hour after the polls had closed tonight by the Republican state and county organization chairmen.

The primary elections in this city were made chaotic by one of the worst ballot mixups known for many years here, and the results of the election were considerably delayed.

William Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Republican state committee, claimed at 10 o'clock that the opposi-

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS TAKE A STRIKE VOTE

May Tie Up Transportation by Middle of April if Increase Not Granted

New York, March 26.—What was virtually a strike vote was taken today by the executive committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers representing 25,000 workers on 60 roads in the eastern section of the United States. Thus there is now before the country not only the probability of a national coal strike, but the possibility that before the middle of April, there will be a stoppage of work on all the transportation system this side of the Mississippi.

The action of the engineers executive committee was unanimous, and was taken after a conference at the Broadway Central Hotel lasting two hours. Fifty representatives of the brotherhood were present.

Warren S. Stone grand chief said after the meeting that ballots would be printed and sent out among the men affected by yesterday's formal refusal of the railroads to advance pay, and that a strike vote would be taken on all the systems involved.

By the middle of next week the ballots will have been returned. On April 10 the executive committee again convene at New York, either to declare a strike effective or issue an appeal for mediation under the Erdman act.

There was apparently little doubt in the minds of the conferees regarding the manner in which the 25,000 workmen will vote. The tone of refusal from the railroads to consider the demands for an 18 percent wage increase indicated that so far as the employees are concerned there is nothing further to be gained by negotiating, and that the only way in which an advance is to be gained is by bringing the situation to a crisis.

A vote for the strike is confidently expected, but Stone declined to say whether such a vote would be followed by an immediate suspension of work.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Elect Two New Officers and Talk Over Baseball Situation.

The Portsmouth Council Knights of Columbus, held a largely attended meeting on Tuesday evening. James J. Morrissey, one of the most popular members of the council, was elected unanimously to the office of Warden. Since the council leased the rooms in the old custom house several months ago, Mr. Morrissey has spent considerable time putting the same in shape, and has been a faithful attendant at the meetings so that the honor accorded him is well deserved.

Mr. Leo V. Gray, a popular stenographer in the machinery division at the navy yard, was elected to the office of Lecturer, and he enters this office with the best wishes of the council. Although but a resident of Portsmouth a short time, he has proven himself to be a merrymaker, and he will surely make good in his new position.

The baseball situation was discussed, and the Knights will surely try to make the game, as far as they are concerned, interesting. Jere Lyons was re-elected manager of the ball team, and this year he is quite sure that he can lead his team to victory.

FOOD PRICES SOAR WHEN PACKERS GO FREE

Result of Jury Verdict Felt in Market by Rapid Rise in Prices

Chicago, March 26.—After the announcement of the acquittal of the packers today the price of provisions advanced all around. The rise was 15 cents for pork and bacon and 7 1/2 to 10 cents for lard. The addition to the cost of packing house products was attributed on Change to active covering by shorts and to sympathy with the bulge in the price of corn. Swift and company shares advanced 2 3/4 points on the Chicago Stock Exchange an hour before the verdict. After the jury had come in, a further jump upward occurred, making a total advance of 6 points.

TWO STATES FORBID BANS

Mrs. Bryer Cannot Marry Her Father-in-law

The arrangements for the wedding of the widow, Mrs. Katherine M. Bryer of Belmont, to her father-in-law, Frank A. Bryer of Sandwich, N. H., suddenly were interrupted yesterday by the discovery that the laws of Massachusetts do not permit the marriage of a woman to her husband's father.

At the suggestion that the wedding be conducted in New Hampshire, the home State of Frank A. Bryer, it also was discovered that the New Hampshire law regarding the matter is identical with that of this state and that the wedding could not legally take place there.

Section 2, Chapter 151, of the Revised Laws of Massachusetts reads: "No woman shall marry her father, grandfather, son, grandson, brother, stepfather, grandmother's husband, daughter's husband, granddaughter's husband, husband's father, husband's grandfather, husband's son, sister's or father's brother, son, sister's son, father's brother, mother's brother."

"This prohibition shall continue notwithstanding the dissolution by death or divorce of the marriage by which the affinity was created."

Chapter 174, Section 2, of the New Hampshire laws is identical with the above Massachusetts law.

The discovery that the marriage cannot legally take place in either State amazed the families of both the intended bride and groom. The arrangements for the wedding, which was scheduled to take place in June suddenly were halted and the couple are wholly at sea as to the course they will pursue. Nothing but a special law would permit the marriage in either state.

A NEW REMEDY FOR SKIN TROUBLES

Many skin troubles are not caused by the blood as most people think. External treatment is therefore the most direct and rational way to effect a cure. A chemist, who was convinced of this fact found that an extract of the plant Juniperus Oxycodrus was most soothing and healing to an irritated, inflamed or diseased skin. By a special method of treatment this vegetable extract is now combined with other antiseptic, healing ingredients, and is known as Cadum. This new compound was cured thousands of cases of eczema and other distressing skin diseases after other remedies had failed. It stops the terrible itching, with the first application. Cadum can be used with confidence in all skin affections of infants and adults. It has proved a blessing to many who have suffered for years from tormenting and disfiguring skin diseases. Cadum acts quickly upon eczema, pimples, blotches, rashes, eruptions, sores, rough skin, chafage, itching piles. Of all druggists, 25c.

Oxford and Cambridge Varsity Crews
Ready for Annual Race on the Thames

OXFORD

CAMBRIDGE

PHOTOS BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

London, March 27.—The annual aquatic struggle between the rival eight oared crews of Oxford and Cambridge will be decided March 30 over the historic course on the river Thames from Putney to Mortlake. The contest promises to be exceedingly keen, with the odds slightly in favor of the Dark blue crew. The advantage of starting the season with almost a complete set of finished oarsmen has manifested itself in the training of the rival crews, as Oxford, with six of the winning crew of last year as a foundation, has been able to show "an all round polish in oarsmanship seldom before witnessed. Oxford last year won the race in 18 minutes 29 seconds, a record for the course, and the oarsmen are more advanced with regard to the time still to elapse before the race than either of the last three winning Oxford eights. The Cambridge crew has met with hard luck during the entire preliminary training. With but three of last year's crew as a nucleus for this year's boat the coaches were compelled to make changes before balancing the boat. During the past two weeks the rowing has become much cleaner, the rhythm showing marked improvement. The recent improvement has led to the belief among the Canterbury followers that their favorites have a good fighting chance of success.

Miss Julia A. Tibbets, sister of George F. W. Tibbets of Berwick who died March 17, died about 6 o'clock Monday morning, March 25. She as well as her brother, was born on the Tibbets' homestead and she has made her home with him and his family for many years. Miss Tibbets was in her 82nd year and would have celebrated that birthday on July 4th next. Her brother's funeral took place last Thursday at 1.30 o'clock and hers will occur just a week from that time to a day and at the same hour.

Arthur J. Herson of South Berwick, for the past few years employed as passenger brakeman on the Boston and Maine has gone to Boston, where he has accepted a position with the Stevens-Duryea Automobile company.

The South Berwick public schools reopened Monday morning after a two weeks' vacation.

The body of Ephraim Furbush was found in South Sanford pond, Friday. It was evident that he had cut a large hole through the ice and measured the depth of water with a pole which he cut at the shore of the pond. After taking the pole back to shore he removed his overcoat, folded it and placed it under a pine, where he left his ax, after which he plunged under the ice. Coroner Luther A. Harn decided that it was a case of suicide and that an inquest was not necessary. Furbush, although well-to-do, had been fretful of late because of lack of work. Besides his wife he is survived by two sons, a daughter and a brother.

TIGHTWAD TAKE NOTICE.

Those tightwads who are accustomed to make their wives come to them to obtain the necessary money for household expenses or even a stick of even a stick of Depsin chewing gum will be interested in the remarks of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, wife of the former chief of the United States Bureau of chemistry, who states that the time is not far away when laws will be passed giving the wife and mother who toils long hours in the home without recompense or a single penny, a salary based on her husband's income. She believes that the wife's wages should when possible be one third of the husband's salary and never less than one fourth.

Mr. Wiley says: "Right the wife is the only hard working human being who gets nothing for her 10, 12, sometimes longer hours of hard labor a day. Perhaps she is given board and lodging, but even servants get more than that."

"I have known women in Washington society to go from week to week with never a penny of their own. They are industrial slaves, dependent for every necessity of life upon the whims and good nature of their husbands."

"I can really see no reason, however why a mother should get more salary than a wife who has no children. A woman's duty to her child is such a high plane that the financial question cannot enter there. Her pay will come from the children themselves."

"It is the duty of every woman to learn a profession or trade to support herself and aid the family, if necessary. Nevertheless, the husband should be responsible for the wages of the busy mother or the sickly wife."

The St. Louis Times says: The seven governors are also, fortunate in this, that they can blame it all on Mr. Stubbs, and everybody will be here then.

The New York World says: The report that President Taft will sign the Democratic Wool-Tariff bill is it ever gets to him must be of Democratic origin. It accords with what has happened best calculated to help that party and hurt Taft.

A contemporary says that a young man will teach a girl to swim in the summer time and in the winter time teach a girl to skate, but it is seldom the same girl. This has been the custom for decades and will probably be in vogue for some years to come.

The residents of Wolfeboro, Madison and other places on the Conway division of the Boston and Maine railroad must have thought that Spring had arrived with a vengeance on Tuesday morning when they looked at the thermometer and saw that it registered four below zero.

Five West Point cadets recently dismissed for drunkenness may be saved by President Taft. They are from Virginia, Florida, Georgia and Delaware, and their re-instatement has been urged by Senators Martin, Fletcher, Bacon and du Pont, who do not believe that their offense warrants dismissal. The President has promised to investigate.

The Boston Transcript says: The rivalry between government construction of battleships and that carried on in private yards is increased by the progress of work on the sister ships, Texas and New York. The Newport News Company contracted to build the former for $5,830,000. For the other in appropriation of $6,000,000 was made, and later an additional $400,000 was granted. Now the Navy Department estimates that for a total of $7,230,000 will be necessary for completion, or $1,563,000 more than the Texas will cost, while the latter is much farther advanced.

A Washington correspondent says: Beware of new coins! You may get "currants," a new disease which has attacked the women clerks of the treasury who handle gold currency. The symptoms of the new malady are acute attacks of dizziness, sharp pains in the neck, followed by a severe headache. When several fair clerks were thus affected recently an investigation was made. So far local physicians have not been able to determine whether the ailment is conveyed by germs. For the treatment of "Currants" cases, an emergency station has been established in the treasury buildings.

We have no fear of the disease reaching the daily newspaper office, unless it should become inoculated into dimes, nickles and even smaller currency.

Gleanings From Files of Portsmouth Chronicle

In addition to the Virginia, two other mail-clad or armored vessels are in course of completion at the Gosport yard. One of these is the sunken Delaware, a very large vessel, which shared the fate of the Merrimack, at the commencement of this rebellion. The other is doubtless some old hull which has been brought from the watery sepulchre to new and diabolic life. At Richmond also two iron-clad vessels are being built. Some of these bomb-proof fabrics, I am advised, are nearly completed, and the greatest exertion is being made to hasten forth the whole batch—Fortress Monroe Cor. of Philadelphia Ledger.

HISTORIC TEXAS FORT IS BEING DESTROYED

G. W. B. Tells of His visit to the Alamo

Twelve years ago it was the good fortune of this writer to visit the old Alamo Fort at San Antonio, Tex. It is now with a very natural feeling of sadness, we learn that the old historical structure is in ruins, presenting an appearance, possibly similar to that of the day in February, 1836, when the Mexicans under Gen. Santa Ana stormed over the walls had become exhausted and put to death the noble band of Texans who held it.

Whatever was modern in the fort has been destroyed in the effort to take away every semblance of commercialism to which the building has been given over for the last half century. For several days the building has been overrun with relic hunters, but brick and mortar was about all they could find to reward them. An especial search has been made for the rock on which David Crockett is said to have carved his name, but neither it nor a rock bearing the name of any of the Alamo defenders has been found.

The Alamo will ever have a high though somewhat somber place in the pages of history. It was one of the earliest of the "missions." (It is nearly two hundred years old) bearing a prominent part in all the history of Texas, but famous above everything else for its heroic defense in February and March, 1836, by the Texans, 140 in number, against the attack by the Mexican army of 7500 men under Gen. Santa Ana, whose orders were to shoot all prisoners. For eleven days the bombardment of the Alamo was continued. The story as told us upon our visit in 1900, by a lady who was then stationed there, a descendant of one of the officers of that noble garrison, is full of pathetic interest.

Colonel Travis was in command and sent James Butler Bonham of South Carolina to Faunlin and the government with appeals for aid, which were unavailing. Returning, Bonham found the little force desperately beleaguered and in a hopeless condition. His companions urged him to turn back, but he would not, feeling it his duty to report to Col. Travis, that there was no hope, and that he should stay and die with them. That was the kind of men who composed that garrison. Each day witnessed supreme examples of heroism on their part. The Mexicans lost in the fight 1900 men. At last, on the 6th of March, the worn out and fatigued garrison was taken by assault. When it was evident that the end was at hand Col. Travis drew a line with his sword upon the floor and asked all who would slay and die to cross it. All but one did so, and even Col. Bowie who was wounded and unable to move, requested that he should be carried on his couch across the line. Then came the fearful hand to hand encounter as the Mexicans succeeded in entering the fortress; and every one of that company died fighting bravely to the last. Col. Bowie was bayoneted while helpless in his bed. Among these heroes was the famous Col. David Crockett, who died amid a circle of slaughtered foes. When the fight was over the blood stood ankle deep on the floor of the Alamo. Santa Ana had the bodies taken out and burned.

All this came to us with peculiar emphasis and pathos as we stood within the walls of that same fortress and pictured with our minds eye all the scenes that were enacted in that fearful struggle. In one corner was the room in which Col. Bowie was bayoneted. No quarter was asked and none given; and now the people of Texas have placed upon record, to stand as long as history shall be read, the eulogy, "Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat—the Alamo had none." This is indeed the Thermopylae of America, and well did the Texans have their battle cry at San Jacinto, "Remember the Alamo!" It was more inspiring than has been to us the old cry "Remember the Maine!"

After spring target practice, the battleships of the fleet, excepting the New Hampshire, the Mississippi and the Nebraska will visit their home yards for docking; the North Dakota and the Delaware docking at Norfolk on this occasion, but proceeding when undocked to New York. The Connecticut, the Michigan, the Vermont and the Virginia will remain at their home yards for overhauling until June 30. The Florida and the Utah will remain at New York for repairs until June 1.

Upon completion of target practice the North Carolina will proceed to the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H.; the Salem to the Navy Yard, Boston; and the Birmingham to the Navy Yard Philadelphia to be placed in reserve on April 20, on which date the fifth division will be detached from the Atlantic fleet.

The "Taylor System" Again.

A mass meeting was recently held in Brooklyn by the people in the interest of obtaining more work for the navy yard, in that district and particularly of having the building of one of the new battleships assigned there. This meeting came at a particularly appropriate time for arousing interest, as there have been heavy discharges of workmen recently, due to lack of work. Unfortunately, however, it developed into a protest against the so-called "Taylor system" of scientific management, rather than in advancing arguments in favor of building a battleship at the yard.

PEOPLE'S OPINIONS.

All Praise to the Hero.

Another hero has been added to the list which are numerous in the ranks of the veteran firemen of this city as a result of the ordeal or supreme test on the city dump on Tuesday.

The test has determined once and for all the fitness of one of the members of the Franklin Pierce Association to stand up and be counted among those who make up the ranks of red shirt heroes of this country. Nearly a half century has passed since he took up fire fighting and is yet to see the day when the fire demon put him down for the count.

As an eye witness of his work against the fiery forked flames, I wish to say that the veteran association should hasten to make him first class and hang his life sized photo in a conspicuous place in the quarters on Maplewood avenue. There may be others and there are others on the waiting list to qualify for this test, but they must bear in mind that it takes the real spirit of tried and true fire fighters to give such battle to the flames as our friend Asbestos Charley.

MIRABILE DICTU

MASTER-SMITH OF THE DAY

Produces Steel of Cutting Capacity Surpassing Work of Legendary Swordmaker.

We are all familiar with the old-time legends of the master-smith, who, by his skill at the forge, was able to produce for the hero of the tale a weapon which should cut through the armor of giant or wizard and maintain its temper and edge against all tests.

The modern industrial captain has to cut his way also through metal, and one of the notable achievements of the engineer and metallurgist has been his success in the production of steels of hardness and cutting capacity which, altogether surpass the finest work of the legendary swordmaker.

Not content with the manufacture of tool steel of hardness, high-speed cutting capacity and exquisite temper, the modern master-smith has now produced a method of converting soft iron or low-grade steel into tool-steel of the highest grade simply by the infusion of the necessary proportion of carbon and other elements by contact and proper heat treatment, so that keen-edged chisels may be made from railroad spikes and machine cutters from soft and inexpensive steel.

Trials of cutting-tools made by the infusion process at the Ordnance Bureau of the United States navy department have given such remarkable results, both as to cutting speed and endurance, that the chief of the bureau says: "From the test of the infusion-treated samples, it appears superior to any hardening process now in use at the naval gun factory," so that the modern master-smith has outstripped the fabled tales of the wizard weapon-maker of medieval times.

RATHER CRUDE AND BOLD

Bethel Preacher Gives Congregation of Shellbacks Startling Description of Bad Place.

"I knew the late Clark Russell well," said a Philadelphia shipping reporter. "The unhappy man, racked with rheumatism, lay for many years on his back as helpless as a newborn babe. That, perhaps, was how he came to leave $100,000. He couldn't spend any of his money, you see."

"Authors make less than is supposed. Clark Russell was once talking to me about authors' earnings. He said that publishers exaggerated the earnings so as to get more people to write for them."

"He said that the millionaire publisher, in order to draw authors on, painted the prosperity of the successful writer with the bold, crude exaggeration wherewith the preacher in the mariners' bethel painted the horrors of the bad place."

A bethel preacher, he explained, was describing the bad place to a congregation of shellbacks:

"Shipmates," he said, "you've seen the molten iron come running out of the furnace, haven't you? It comes out white hot, sizzling and hissing like some kind of snake, horrible monster. Well, shipmates--"

"The preacher pointed his forefinger at the awed shellbacks."

"Well, shipmates," he said solemnly, "they use that stuff for ice-cream in hell."

ROCKINGHAM COUNTY

The Methodist church at North Salem was dedicated Sunday. The old church was destroyed by fire two years ago, and a new church has been built. The building is a very pretty structure. Besides the auditorium there is a large vestry and a kitchen.

A copy of the annual-town report of the town of Newton for March 1, 1899 to March 1, 1900, is the property of Samuel Hayford of that town. It is noted from the list of names in the report that not a single person is living at the present time. The report is printed on a single sheet about 8x10 inches, and judging from some of the items, the town was run very cheaply. One item was the funeral expenses of one of the town charges, which was $8.50. The absence of the auditors report and of the other officers was a peculiar feature. The selectmen for that year were John Hoyt, Ephraim Carter, Simeon Rowell. The receipts of the town were $1459.24; miscellaneous expenses were $654.19; care of the poor $254.48; expense of maintaining schools $320. With the abatement of some of the taxes there was a balance of $109.12 left in the treasury. The electric lights in the K. of P. building at Plaistow were used for the first time Friday evening at the meeting of Goodwill Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

A STRANGE COMBINATION.

To the Editor:
Our esteemed neighbor, Horace Mitchell, has sprung some astounding revelations.

He says the Maine came here under Taft.

Nov. 14, 1908 my diary states that I visited the U. S. S. Maine, already undergoing repairs at this yard, during Roosevelt's administration and the year before Mr. Taft was inaugurated. Did it come by wireless?

The same with the Wisconsin, sailing today, which Teddy sent here for extensive repairs. The same man started so much business at the yard that it continued a good while after he was president.

Certainly the New Hampshire delegation and the Maine Senators have faithfully labored for the welfare of our yard. Their very experience and prestige have worked wonders, and they have tried to do this as we never can appreciate. In their growing years the survivors are working against heavy odds for it, and now realize the enormity of the task.

Imagine Meyer standing for T. R. Feb. 22, before Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy was announced, after the cabinet meeting at the Capitol, George Von L. said: "I have been associated with President Taft, for three years and I shall support him for re-election." Boston Transcript, Page 1, 8th col. Feb. 23.

I learn that 21 out of 26 caucus in Maine, including two cities, instructed for the colonel.

Gold Dust does most of the cleaning without your assistance, and does it, too, in a quicker and more thorough manner than will soap or other cleansers.

represented his district several times in the New Hampshire Legislature, took prominent part in city affairs and was a man of means. When his child was but a girl, father and mother separated, the child remaining with the mother, and from then until many years after the child knew no father's care.

The girl grew to womanhood, married and came to this city, where she has made her home for many years as the wife of Frank E. Smith. Her father afterward remarried and spent his life in Dover. There were no children by the second wife, and when his second wife died he was left alone. A short time before his death he repented and sent word that he wanted to see his daughter. Though giving no apparent heed to her through all the years of their separation, Mr. Worthen, nevertheless, preserved a corner in his heart for his daughter, and when she responded to his call he resolved to make up in worldly goods what he had deprived her of in affection.

Father and daughter corresponded, though they saw each other but seldom. A niece, Bertha Worthen, of Amesbury, daughter of his brother, went to Dover to care for him in his old age, and at his death she, too, was remembered in his will, a life interest in his Dover home being left her. He was taken ill several months ago and steadily failed. He had twice added codicils to his will, each time naming a new executor or else changing a bequest, though the general text of the will remained the same. At one time his daughter's husband was made an executor, but he afterward amended that and a third codicil made about 10 days before his death last month named a Dover man as executor to serve with other New Hampshire friends of his lifetime.

He bequeathed liberal remembrances to his nephews and nieces, he was donor to the charities of his home city and to Amesbury, where he lived as a boy, and made bequests of nearly one-half of his estate, but what remains, and it will reach nearly $25,000, will go to Mrs. Smith, sufficient to make her comfortable for the rest of her life, for it is in valuable securities and real estate.

Mrs. Smith did not know that there had been a will made until after she went to Dover last month to attend her father's funeral.

MUSICAL AT THE UNITARIAN CHAPEL

There was a large and representative audience at the Unitarian chapel on Court street Tuesday evening, and they were all delighted with the splendid concert program.

It was a lecture on Oratorio, read by Dr. B. C. Woodbury, with the musical numbers interspersed by Miss Evelyn Blair of Boston, soprano.

Both ladies were in fine voice, and their selections were delightfully rendered.

Miss Florence G. Marshall presided at the piano in her usual acceptable manner.

He Never Will Understand

Mrs. Bruce put down the letter in a flutter of excitement. Her face was flushed with pleasure and her eyes sparkled with anticipation. She hurried to the telephone, but just as she laid her hand on the receiver she changed her mind.

"No, I'll have the fun of telling Dick face to face," she said to herself. The thought of his surprise and delight quickened her feet on the stairs as she ran to her room to dress for the street. All the way downtown she pictured her husband's amazement and pleasure in the news she had for him. She determined to make him guess a few times before she told him.

It was with some difficulty that she modified the illumination of her beaming face as she entered her husband's office. He must not suspect at first that she was the bearer of such good tidings. As it happened, he was busy telephoning when she approached his desk and he merely nodded as she sank into a chair by his side. She had therefore plenty of time to compose her features. So it was with quite a successfully grave face that she greeted him when he finally ceased his telephonic conversation.

"Well, dear?" he began. At the same instant the telephone bell began also, and in another second he was deeply engrossed in a conversation that to Mrs. Bruce seemed to have lasted fully ten minutes.

"Dick, I came down to—" she said when at last he hung up the receiver. "Just a minute, Lucy. I've got to call up Bentley at once and tell him of this matter that Hardwick was phoning me about."

After Bentley had been put in possession of a long list of facts and details that to Mrs. Bruce were about as clear as so much Sanskrit her hand again turned to her with a well coming smile.

"This morning, Dick, I received a letter from—"

"Ting-a-ling, ting-a-ling," rang the telephone. Its insistent demand for his attention promptly brought Bruce's ear to the receiver.

"By George, is that right?" he exclaimed after he had listened a minute. "It's a pretty big deal, isn't it? Well, you'll have to go to Hardwick for the figures. Yes, we can send over our schedule, but Hardwick can give you more data. Yes, certainly, I'll ask him. Don't mention it. I have plenty of time. No trouble whatever." He hung up the receiver.

"That was a chance to do the great amalgamated company a little favor," he said smilingly to Mrs. Bruce. But before his hand had left the receiver he changed his mind and took it down again. Then followed a long and diplomatic appeal to Hardwick. Mrs. Bruce sat through it patiently, buoyed up by the thought of the perfectly delightful surprise she still had in store for her husband.

Once more the receiver was hung up on his hook and Bruce, swinging around in his chair, said, "Going shopping, Lucy?"

"No, Dick, I came down especially to tell you—" Then the loud ring of the telephone drowned her voice.

"Hallo. Yes. Oh, Mr. Bonchorn! Very glad to hear from you. Why, yes, I think so. No trouble at all. I have the whole project mapped out here in my desk. Yes, if you wish, I can read off the main points for you."

Bruce drew a thick package of papers from a pigeon hole and began to read slowly and carefully numerous paragraphs and long lists of figures. Mrs. Bruce gave his back a despairing glance, fidgeted for ten minutes and then, rising quietly, slipped out of the office.

Half an hour later she called up her husband on the telephone from a dry goods store. Somewhat to her surprise the line was not busy and she got the connection at once.

"Is this you, Dick?"
"Yes, Lucy. Where in the world did you disappear to? I was dumfounded when I turned from the phone a minute ago to find you gone. Why didn't you wait?"

"Because I came downtown purposefully to tell you something. I got a letter from Mrs. Morse today. She says that she and Mr. Morse are going to California in their private car week after next and they want us to go with them. Mr. Morse thinks that will give you a chance to visit the San Francisco agency. He's going to write you or call you up on the long distance, but Mrs. Morse said she couldn't wait to tell me of the plan."

"Fine!" said Bruce. "But, Lucy, why in the world didn't you tell me this when you were in the office? It takes my breath away. I don't see how you could keep it to yourself all the time you were over here."

"Don't you, really?" returned Mrs. Bruce, laughing.

When he found that she had broken the connection Bruce said to himself, "Well, if I live to be a hundred and seven I'll never understand women."

He Might.

"Dinkie wouldn't take a dollar that didn't belong to him, no matter how hard up he was."

"Suppose he had a chance to take a million dollars?"

"Ahem! Well, Dinkie is a man of spirit."

Kindly Intentions

The first time Holpeter saw the dog he walked on rapidly and tried to think of something else. Memories of past benevolences in the canine line and their resultant troubles prompted him to adopt this course. All his life Holpeter had been seeing homeless dogs, and even he had reached the point where he realized that it was not always well to have too acute a vision.

Further, this particular dog was not at all the sort of dog a sane person would care to see. It might have been almost anything in the line of dog except a Mexican hairless, because it was so grimy and matted that its original style of architecture and decoration was quite obliterated. But Holpeter had caught a glance from its eye that struck in. He turned up his fur collar and dug his hands farther into his pockets and strode on, frowning.

"I came near bringing a dog home," Holpeter told his wife at dinner that night.

"My goodness!" cried she. "I should think you'd have more sense!"
"Oh, I was just joking!" Holpeter made haste to say. "We can't have a dog in a flat."

The next morning as he he walked down the street Holpeter saw the dog again, shivering in the mouth of an alley, tall between legs.

"Good boy!" Holpeter said recklessly and snapped his fingers.

The dog put forward one shivering paw and then huddled back. It was too cold evidently to risk the effort which might end in a rebuff.

That noon, in the midst of his hot lunch Holpeter choked. "But it hasn't had a square meal for weeks!" he growled.

"Huh?" said the man who was talking to him.

"Nothing at all!" Holpeter snapped.

The next morning in his pocket reposed a neat little packet of meat and bones and Holpeter was terribly concerned when the dog was not at the usual alley. He found the beast in a block away, however, and gave him the food. He stood watching it eat and was run into by six men inside of a minute.

"Say," Holpeter broke out to his wife that evening, "he'd be a fine little fellow if he had a bath and was fed up!"

Mrs. Holpeter, with wifely intuition, jumped the conversational gap and guessed right the first time. "Henry," she said, "I wish you'd get that dog out of your mind! Do you remember the collier you brought home which ate up your aunt's new sealskin and lost you a legacy?"

"Well, there are no more legacies to lose," said her husband cheerfully. "And if you could see his pathetic eyes!"

Holpeter each morning began to get anxious when he was a block away from the alley frequented by the dog. If he failed to see it he hung around to wait for it. His efforts to further his acquaintance with the little beast went for naught. The dog had stood so much abuse that its suspicions were deep.

Finally on a day which was so cold that ice cream would have tasted like a hot drink Holpeter threw caution to the winds.

"It's a shame," he said, "to think of that nice little dog freezing to death and starving and nobody willing to put out a helping hand! I'm going to take him home and fix him up!"

Fired by this virtuous resolve, Holpeter left work an hour earlier than usual that afternoon to search for the friendless pup. When he saw it and whistled it edged away.

"Poor chap!" Holpeter said. "It doesn't know I'm his friend!"

The dog ran across the street and Holpeter followed, narrowly escaping the wheels of an automobile and followed by the lavish remarks of its chauffeur. Once on the sidewalk the dog started to run and Holpeter broke in to a gallop. The woman whose handbag he carried away on a coat-tail button in his haste protested so vociferously that Holpeter, quite unconsciously of his crime, was forced to stop because of the crowd that harassed him.

Everybody told the policeman that Holpeter was trying his best to get away because they saw him dodging and running! It was an exceedingly cold evening and the policeman was not in a pleasant frame of mind.

Holpeter got home at 11 o'clock that night and told his impassioned story to his wife.

"Well," she said when he had ended his harrowing tale, "what became of the dog?"

"Dog!" roared Holpeter. "If he has any sense he's running yet!"

The Photographer's Way

"I've been looking at your framed photographs down in the reception room and I don't like any of them!" announced the girl in the evening gown, as she emerged from the dressing room into the photographer's studio and posed herself gracefully on the Louis XIV. chair.

"What's the matter with them?" asked the photographer.

"Well," replied the girl, "I've ideas of my own—you know I attend art school and we've studied portraiture. Now, there's a certain stiffness in all of those photographs downstairs—"

"Stiffness!" interrupted the photographer, brusquely. "Well, all I can say is that your art school needs a new teacher! Why, every one of those photographs that you criticize has won medals—two of them in Paris!"

"I can't help that," returned the girl, gently but firmly. "On the face of that 'Madonna and Child' that's marked 'First Prize' there's an extremely worried look—you can see that the camera was held a second too long and the product isn't easy and natural."

"Well, but Madonnas are all sort of worried—look at the great ones," protested the photographer, earnestly.

The girl smiled amusedly, as she might have smiled at a small boy expressing his views on art. "But, don't you see, they're natural in those great pictures," she said. "The worry, if that's what you call it, isn't because the Madonna's afraid her mouth will be stiff from holding the expression too long. Her eyes aren't stiff from being afraid of winking and blinking. Do you see what I mean?" She dropped her train more gracefully.

"Well, we've got to hurry now," said the photographer, glancing at his watch and looking meaningfully at the closed doors of the various dressing rooms. "How do you want yours taken? I suppose you want to pose yourself?"

"Of course," responded the girl, coldly. She smoothed back her hair and smiled sweetly, bending a trifle forward. "There, I think this is a very good pose," she remarked, modestly.

"Um-hum!" the operator smiled. "That'll be a peach. I'll give you a nice big head and bring the forehead out beautifully! It'll quite hide your smile with your nose, which will be large enough for any modest human being, and if I take it full length people will wonder whether one foot is really so much larger than the other or if it's just your shoes."

She heard him snap the bulb—it clicked loudly—and so she knew that was over.

"Now, another pose, please!" He was aggressively polite.

The girl in the evening gown held herself rigidly. "I think I'll have one, now, sitting down—just put myself in the attitude and when my expression is really that of a dreamer—when I've sufficiently forgotten your presence and that of the camera—you may snap me."

The photographer drew up a chair with much commotion and settled himself in it. "All right, get set!" he ordered, wearily.

The girl, for lack of a window, selected a certain lenient fly to set her soul upon in meditation.

"Well," she exclaimed, after five silent minutes had elapsed, "why don't you snap me?"

"I haven't seen that dreamy expression yet." The tone of the photographer was calm.

The girl opened her lips to speak but closed them and took up her position again. "Snap me in two minutes!" she ordered, tersely.

She dreamed during what seemed to her several minutes without hearing a sound from the camera. Her lips were dry and her eyes ached from being kept in one position. She closed her eyes a second for rest, wiping her lips with her tongue. When—click! She knew the photograph was taken.

"Just two minutes," exclaimed the photographer, energetically, as he shut his watch.

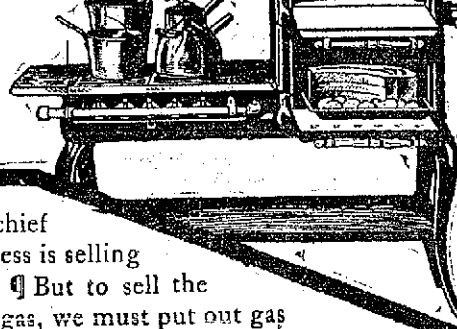

"Do—do you think it will be good?" queried the girl, apprehensively. "I just know I blinked and that I had my tongue out in that last one!"

"Well, you can't tell about these artistic pictures," commented the photographer, sagely. "But I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll take a few quick snaps, now, on my own book. Just you sit and do what I tell you and I think you'll manage to get a few good poses for you."

When the door of the dressing room closed on the girl in pink the photographer said to his assistant, who had come in to remove the plates: "I fooled her, all right—can't afford to let those people run the studio. Why, every woman would be trying to pose herself and they would spoil plates by the score. She took some classy poses—and when she was tired holding them I snapped the case of my watch shut—and told her how fierce the pictures would be. Of course, I'll tell her that they came out too dark to be recognized, so she'll have to be satisfied with one of those poses that I made her take."

"Now, send in the next one."

Ready On Hand

He Came Back

Willaber heard the door of his private office open and was conscious that some one had crossed the room and stood at his elbow, but he finished what he was writing without looking up. Then when he had carefully blotting the line he swung about in his chair. A thickset man with a pale face and close-cropped hair stood before him nervously twisting his hat.

"Dick!" cried Willaber. He sprang from his chair, grasped the visitor's hand and shook it warmly.

"So you remember me, do you, Fred?"

"Remember you? As if I could forget you! Why, man, there has not been a day for the last two years that I have not thought of you!"

"Yes, it has been two years. Two long—"

"Say, do you remember Knowlson's white cherry tree? And Lenta's peach orchard? I certainly am glad to see you again! Sit down. You must go to lunch with me! I want to talk over old times! Say, was there a worse pair of boys in the whole village than we were?"

"The neighbors didn't think so, Fred. But I don't want to talk over these times."

"How does it happen—"

"The governor made me a present of a pardon. I was turned loose New Year's morning."

"Well, isn't that fine! It was a shame you were ever imprisoned. I knew you were not guilty. You couldn't be."

"Yes, I was guilty, Fred."

"You—what!"

"Yes," said the other, a note of hopelessness in his voice. "I only got what was coming to me."

"Why, Dick?"

"Well!"

"I—I am sorry. But never mind, you are free now. You will never do such a thing again."

"Do you believe that?"

"I know it! Have you seen your wife?"

"It was the first place I went, of course."

"Have you told her?"

"That I was guilty? Yes."

"How old is the little girl now?"

"Claribel is three now."

"That's great! And you're going to start all over again and the three of you will be just as happy as fads in a barrel."

"That is what I came to see you about, Fred."

"I'm mighty glad you thought of me the first thing. Tell me what I can do."

"I answered an advertisement for a place in a grocery house this morning, and the job has been promised me provided I can get a letter of reference."

"I asked if a letter from you would do, and the manager told me it would be as good as gold. The place will be held open until noon."

"Did you tell him—"

"That I had been a convict? You don't understand. That would queer me in a minute. I have got to have a chance to prove that I am on the square before I let that be known."

"I—see."

"You will recommend me, Fred?"

"What can I say?"

"Don't you believe me to be honest?"

"I certainly do."

"Then, you'll do it! By George, you always were the squarest—"

"It wouldn't be right."

"Oh, well, I suppose you know best. I was a fool to hope that you would help me. You are like all the rest. A man whose foot has slipped ought to reform and lead an upright life and all that sort of thing, but you won't help him do it. But I'll show you!"

"Show me what, Dick?"

"Show you that I will make good in spite of you and your kind."

"Wait a minute, old friend—"

"Wait? To hear a sermon and get a package of advice? No, I'll go home and tell Nellie that the old friendship from which I had hoped for so much never really existed. I must make my own chance."

"I don't want to preach to you, old boy. Here, let me read you what I was writing when you came in: 'Wanted—Assistant to superintendent. In large factory; must furnish references; apply at office of Wilfred A. Willaber.' Do you see, Dick? I couldn't ask others to do what I wouldn't do myself. That ad was going into tomorrow's paper, but I believe I'll tear it up now."

"Fred, you don't mean—"

"Can you go to work tomorrow, Dick?"

"Fred, I—I—"

"That's all right. I think I am mighty lucky to get a man I know and can trust. Come, put on your hat and go to lunch. Do you know, only yesterday I was thinking of you, and the time you got hung up by the trousers in Knowlson's cherry tree!"
